WORK@HOME

The world has changed. For many, the work from home mandate has unlocked an entirely new way to work that was previously untapped. Likely, as workers begin to journey back to the office, they will continue to embrace the flexibility their home office provided and expect it to be part of the core offering for focus work. Like any other ME space, the home office should help define boundaries, boost productivity, create comfort, and decrease distraction.

From cozy niches to multi-tiered shared spaces and beyond, our Work@Home solutions and direct-to-you delivery options provide for a variety of full-time or part-time needs.
COMMUNAL ENGAGEMENT

Coming together as a team to solve problems is still the foundation of WE spaces. However, in this new workplace era, special care and consideration need to be given to ensure these spaces perform adequately and continue to attract users. By providing proper distancing, limiting occupancy, dedicating room assignments, allowing flexibility, establishing cleaning protocols, and limiting physical contact, WE spaces can remain a viable destination for interactive team activities.

From conference and huddle rooms to libraries, lounges, and informal gathering spaces, our solutions support purposeful collaboration while getting work done.
SOCIAL SOLIDARITY

The core values of any US space are fellowship, community, accessibility, and solidarity. Ranging in size, application, and style, these areas support meetings, learning, wellness, socialization, and business services for the entire workforce. With camaraderie and connection noted as the most missed aspects of daily office life, providing safe yet friendly social spaces to rebuild a sense of community will be critical for workers returning to the workplace. By clearly setting expectations through robust change management and transparent communication, employers can mitigate the anxiety of returning to the workplace and help employees find comfort in their beloved US spaces.

Whether a café or lobby, town hall, wellness nook or work room, our solutions encourage chance encounters and meaningful interactions.
